Amador In Winter: A Great Place For Trout Junkies

Later the fog would burn off, but just after dawn when I arrived a heavy overcast hung just above the lake and the bank was wet and slick with dew. The muddy shore gave way to the seemingly black water. With zero wind the lake's surface took on the properties of a giant mirror punctuated with spirals of faint mist that slowly crept toward open water.

Working at the water's edge, I rigged my spinning rod with a clear bobber, followed by a 30-inch leader sporting a No. 8 black woolly bugger. Once the bobber was filled with the water it probably weighed over an ounce.

Bringing the rod back I let go with a blistering cast. The heavy bobber combined with the fact that the reel was spooled with fine diameter 8-pound mono allowed me to shoot the fly far down range, thereby allowing me to cover a maximum amount of territory from my outpost on the bank.

When the rig splashed down I allowed it to settle below the surface for a moment and then started a slow steady retrieve with the bobber just beneath the surface.

As the bobber and fly came into sight 30 feet away I was already thinking about my next cast when I detected a flash behind the gear. A beat later the water swirled and my line came to life.

The trout's first reaction to the sting of the hooked was a brief but vigorous series of headshakes. When that failed to shake the fly loose, the fish panicked and bolted. Line screamed out of my reel against the resistance of the drag.

For the next several minutes I kept the pressure on the fish as my buddy followed me back and forth, up and down the bank, net in hand. At one point I almost had the trout within range of the long-handled net only to have it storm off on a sustained 20 foot run that ended when the fish catapulted out of the water!

Wide Open West Delta Striper & Sturgeon Action

I looked up to check my striper rod, but it stood frozen against the clear blue sky. I spooned a mess of cured salmon eggs onto a square of netting. As I attempted to form a salmon roe ball for sturgeon bait, I glanced up again to check my rod tip. It was no longer in the sky. Instead, it was pegged almost to the surface of the water, pumping wildly.

I recklessly dropped the partially formed roe ball and grabbed a towel to clean my hands. I fumbled the rod out of the holder and uttered, "It's on" to my fishing partner Kirby.

This scene took place on November 7 during the striper portion of a trip to the West Delta. You see, I was trying to tie up roe balls so we could go fish for sturgeon, but the stripers wouldn't give me a break. I can honestly say I have never seen a striper feeding frenzy like the one we had going on that day.

The trip started at the Brannon Island boat ramp at dawn. Kirby Desha and I launched the boat raced downstream to fish the area of the Sacramento River between Decker Island and Pittsburg.

We set anchor in about 26 feet of water and got the rods all set.

The outgoing tide had water speeding past the boat. It was generated by the big gravitational pull of new moon period tides. We started soaking chicken livers wrapped with Miracle Thread on 8/0 circle hooks. The plan was to striper fish until the tide slowed, and then flip over to sturgeon fishing until the incoming tide picked up.

The bites were sparse at first, with only a few small stripers stealing our baits. In the first hour, we had one small keeper and lost another, but mostly had bait

What We're Using

Paul Kneeland - fished Pyramid Lake with John Brassfield of Auburn in the Fish Sniffer 21' Rogue Jet Coastal. They caught

Lahontan cutthroat trout to 5 1/2 pounds, using a Daiwa DXS 8' light action IM-7 graphite trigger stick rigged with a Daiwa Lexa 100 line counter reel loaded with 8 lb test P Line Tactical Fluorocarbon line. They trolled Yakima Bait Mag Lip 3.5 in bloody firetiger and Silver Horde 4 inch spoons in watermelon off the Canon Downriggers at 30 to 40 feet deep and 2.5 mph.

Cal Kellogg - fished Lake Berryessa from his Hobie Pro Angler 14 kayak. Cal focused on bass fishing and landed 11 spotted and smallmouth bass to 2.5 pounds. For working offshore structure with Blade Runner Spoons, Cal employed a 7' Cousin's Tackle baitcasting rod paired with an Abu Garcia Revo STX baitcasting reel spooled with 15 pound Berkeley Vanish fluorocarbon line.

Dan Bacher - fished for rainbow trout at Rollins Lake near Colfax. He used a Berkley Ugly Stick GX2 6' 6" medium action spinning rod, teamed up with a Shakespeare GX235 spinning reel filled with 6 lb. test P-Line CX Premium Fluorocarbon Coated Line. He fished with rainbow Berkley PowerBait, 1/8 oz. gold and black Panther Martins and 2/5 oz. gold/red stripe Little Cleos.

stealers grabbing our baits as fast as we could rig them up.

After an hour or so, the bigger fish started to move in. I saw my noodle rod pump a few times and then stop. I moved into position by steadying the rod with one hand and grabbing the reel handle with the other hand. The rod pumped again, and after about five seconds of movement, I slowly reeled in some line.

Suddenly, the rod slammed to the water, but I kept reeling with the rod still in the holder. Once I was sure the circle hook was pinned in the corner of the fish's mouth, I pulled the rod out of the holder and the fight was on.

This fish was clearly bigger than the others I had hooked earlier in the morning. It peeled line off the reel several times before I got it to the side of the boat. Kirby netted the fish, and I got a quick weight and some photos before releasing it back into the ripping ebb current. The fish came in at just over ten pounds on my Boga Grip, and it marked the beginning of the great feeding frenzy of 2018.

For the next hour, we couldn't bait our hooks fast enough. We lost count, but estimated that we landed between 15 and 20 keeper stripers. As the current began to fade, I tried to prepare sturgeon baits, but it was no use. I finally just reeled in my striper rods to get some roe balls tied up. It was time to go try for sturgeon.

We moved downstream to deeper water looking for sturgeon on the sonar unit. I wasn't seeing much, but below the Pittsburg power plant, I saw 4 or 5 good marks on the screen. We set anchor downstream from the fish in 56 feet of water. The current was really starting to slow down at the end of the outgoing tide.

Since I only had a few extra roe balls tied up, I started making more once I had my rods cast out.

About two minutes into the soak, I was tying my second roe ball. I peeked at my sturgeon rod out of the corner of my eye and saw movement. The tip was pumping up and down about four inches at a time. The scene was played out one again as I frantically dropped the partially formed roe ball and reached for my reel handle. With sturgeon, I use standard J hooks instead of circle hooks, so I reel as fast as possible to set the hook.

I reeled like crazy for about seven seconds but didn't feel any resistance. I stopped, and the rod tip started shaking. "He's still there", Kirby related, and I started reeling again. Finally, the rod loaded up and the battle was on. It was five minutes or longer before I had the fish to the boat side. After a quick measurement and release, the sturgeon was back in the water. Although the fish was a 44-inch keeper, I decided to release it.

We saw two other sturgeon caught by nearby boats, including one by the boat

Kirby Desha of Lincoln with a 7 pound striper that couldn't pass up chicken livers tied to an 8/0 circle hook using Magic Thread. The fish hit during the incoming tide near Chain Island.
